Principals Report:

- Mid-March is the first year anniversary of going into lockdown and quarantine due to COVID-19. Inasmuch as the effects of quarantine, and the virus itself, have been traumatic for some, we remind you that trauma is stored in the body and that the body remembers anniversaries even if the conscious mind does not. As a result, there is a natural building of anxiety up to that time that, if understood, does not need to overwhelm us. To assist with the weight of the pandemic, we have included brain-based strategies for supporting mental health at this time.
